

Search Site

Watch Live TV Now - Start Watching

One Click to Streaming Sites watch-television.com

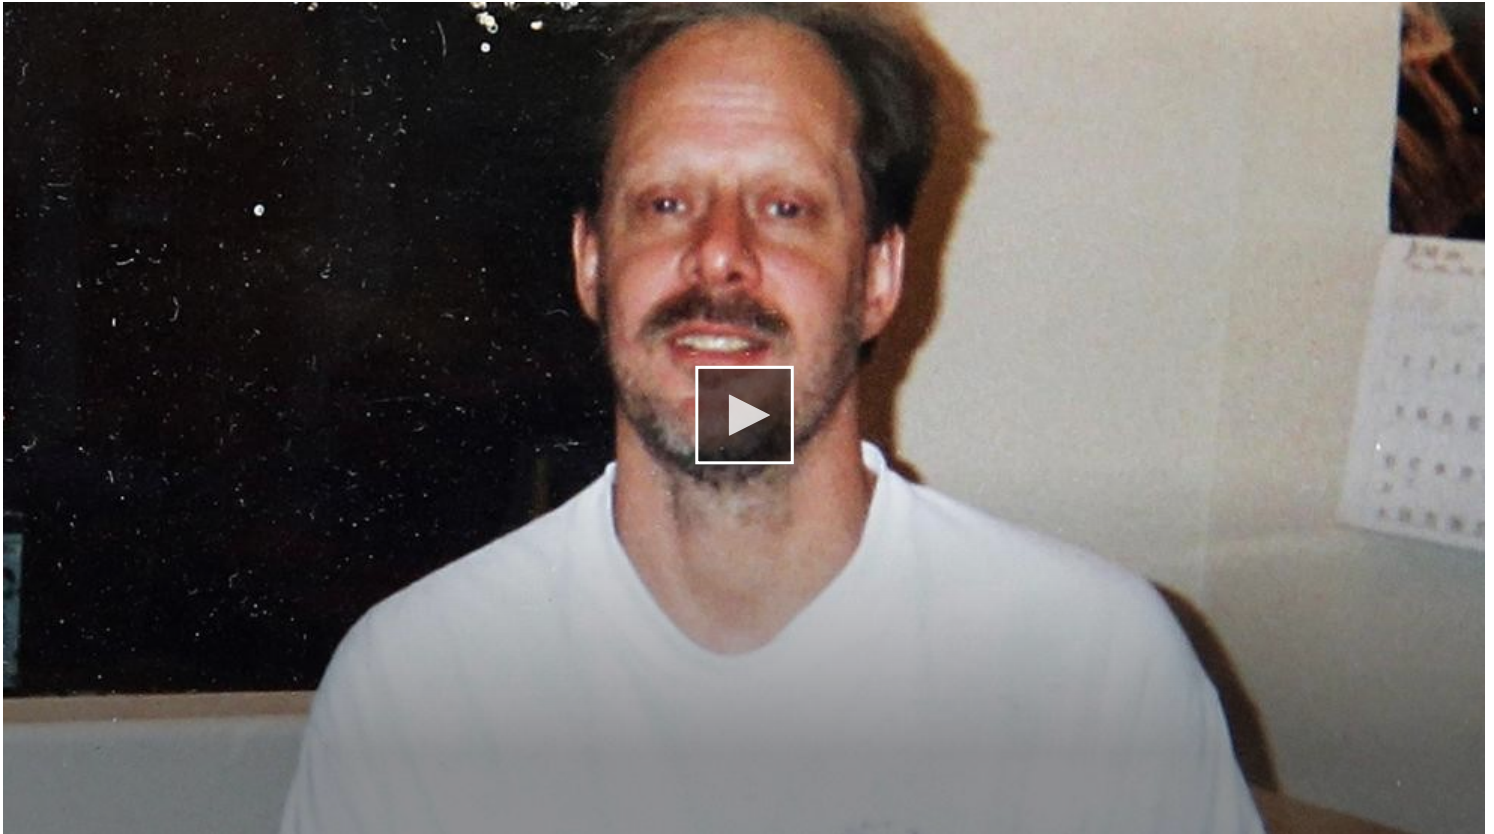

OPEN

Former classmate of Las Vegas shooter: 'He was a closed-in kid'

by Craig Fiegner

Saturday, October 14th 2017

AA

FILE - This undated file photo provided by Eric Paddock shows his brother, Las Vegas gunman Stephen Paddock. Police initially said Stephen Paddock stopped firing on the music festival concert crowd below to shoot through his door and wound a Mandalay Bay security guard who was outside. On Monday, Oct. 9, 2017, they said the guard actually was wounded before Paddock started the massacre. (Courtesy of Eric Paddock via AP, File)

LAS VEGAS (KSNV News3LV) — As soon as Stephen Paddock's name became public as the Las Vegas shooter, a former classmate knew it had to be the same person.

"It struck me immediately – that had to be Steve," says Greg Palast.

Palast says he and Paddock attended Francis Polytechnic in Sun Valley, Calif., and because their names were close in alphabetic order, they were often together when such order was necessary.

71°

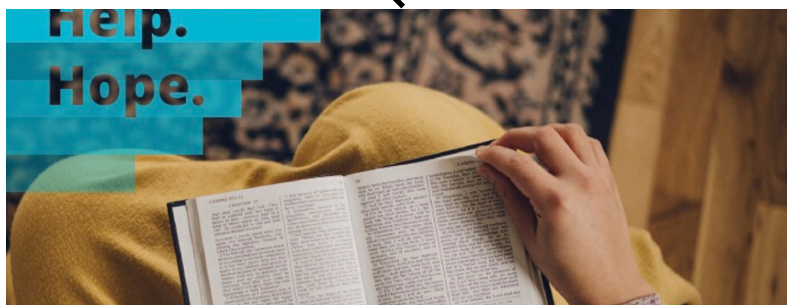

82°

89°

Search Site

Read the Book of Mormon

ComeUntoChrist.org - Sponsored

Learn More >

They were classmates from second grade through their high school graduation.

"The main thing is that he was a math whiz. He was really brilliant," he recalls.

COMPLETE COVERAGE | Las Vegas Mass Shooting

Paddock played tennis on the high school team but was otherwise quiet.

"No one was really close to him. He was a closed-in kid," says Palast.

Palast says the two grew up in impoverished neighborhoods, and that many people knew Paddock's father was a bank robber wanted by the FBI.

"But you know what? Where we lived, a lot of dads were in prison, or going in and out," says Palast.

After high school, Paddock worked as a postal carrier and later as an IRS auditor. Later in life, he had success gambling and investing in real estate.

Police say Paddock's motive remains a mystery.

MORE TO EXPLORE

Gov. Sisolak issues travel advisory for State of Nevada

New Las Vegas ad encourages visitors to return after shutdown

Las Vegas business brings back bartering to stay connected with community

Search Site

What's the Most Popular Surname in Texas?

Ancestry

Randy Jackson: "This Drink Is Like A Powerwash For Your Gut"

Unify Health Labs Multi-GI 5 Supplement

Sponsored Links by Taboola

ADVERTISEMENT

Watch Live TV Now - Start Watching

One Click to Streaming Sites watch-television.com

OPEN

Loading ...